Guest lecture

Guest lecturer in "INTERNET OF THINGS" by Dr. GRKPRASAD, Associate dean, K.L. University.

He has given a brief idea on IOT it relates to physical objects and visual objects; these devices can collect and exchange data embedded with sensors, internet connectivity. He said that father of IOT is Kevin Ashton discovered that entire data is processing by a third-party server known as cloud computing.

Sensor is a device to convert physical to electrical examples: gas, temperature, wind miles,

Actuators can convert physical in to electrical examples: fan, AC, Hydrolic,

The life cycle of IOT is collect, communicate, analyze, act.

IOT are playing a vital role in smart cities, smart grid, Agriculture, Energy waste management, Industries, cars.

- He also explains the utilization of software by using C programmes and array and he also explains about half adder and full adder changing the logic levels using front panel and in block diagram he drawn the circuit and shown how the current flows in particular direction.
- In order to do a practical in LAB we require function generator, cathode ray oscilloscope, block diagram, Bread board and connecting wires to do experiment while in this virtual lab view and we can easily get these instruments in built software and stimulate and easily get the result.
- The primary difference between hardware components and virtual instruments is additional having software for simulation and it is for fast real time processing.
